The recruitment process for this coming academic year has changed. In previous years, different education establishments would be given an allocation which they could recruit and fill. This year there is a national target that is set by the National College of Teachers and Learning (NCTL) and providers can recruit as many trainees as they like (and can provide a suitable service for) until the national target is reached. This means that NO establishment knows when the courses will be closed. We are given updates with percentages from the NCTL and it is from these updates that the data in this table has been taken.

This is the latest information that we have available as of the date shown above.
